T/N GLOSSARY

- Fushimi Inari-Taisha is a huge shrine in Kyoto. Inari, who has been depicted as both male and female, is a god of foxes, of fertility, rice, tea and Sake, of agriculture and industry, of general prosperity and worldly success. Inari was also a god of swordsmiths in earlier Japan. Foxes are represented there as Inari's messengers.

- Omikuji are fortunes written on strips of paper in shrines. They are obtained by making a small offering (5-yen) and then drawing from a box.
